Cookies are small text files placed on to your computer by web sites you visit. We use cookies to improve your experience with our web site, and to allow us to track general usage of our web site so that we can improve it over time.

The table below details the cookies used by www.britishwrestling.org. It explains why we use each cookie, whether the cookie contain any of your personal information (they don't!) and what will happen if you choose not to allow us to use each cookie.

Nemisys	ASPSESSIONIDQCCSQRAT ARPT LastActiveTab	These are 'session cookies', so called because they are deleted at the end of your browser session, in other words when you close your internet browser. Our sessions cookies do not contain any of your personal information. We use "session cookies" for the following reasons. Our web site actually lives on several computers, not just 1. This means we can cope with lots of visitors, and also means if 1 of our computers dies the web site is still available. We use sessions cookies to make sure that for any single visit to our web site you stay on the same computer. This helps us fix any bugs that crop up (because sometimes they happen on just 1 computer, not all of them at once). It also means that we can split web forms over 2 or more pages and still keep track of your progress through the form. Don't worry – we don't put any personally information from the form in to the cookie itself. Disabling these cookies may mean our web site does not work for you.	www.britishwrestling.org

For example, it will tell us how many people visited our site, but not who visited our site. It is expressly against Google's Terms of Service even to try to capture personal information. Google Analytics cookies do not expire – they will last until you delete your cookies. Disabling these cookies means we will think there are fewer people using our web site than there really are.	http://www.google.com/analytics/learn/privacy.html.
